COMPANY OF JERSEY CITY? oscutor McGill Averring that the Stock-holders Gave their Notes for One-Half the Company's Capital, and that President Hayt

Knew the Concern's Financial Condition. The trial of Indian Commissioner Ezra A. Hayt was begun in Jersey City yesterday before Judge Garretson. The charge is that the Comissioner knowingly circulated false information in regard to the capital stock of the International Trust Company, of which he is President. Secretary Frank D. Karr and Director indictment. He said the indictment should aver | Then followed the graduates in evening dress, the character of the "written statement" conemplated by the law makers. As the indictment read it might refer to one of the periodical tatements of its affairs made and sworn to by the officers of the company; to advertisements in a newspaper, or to a tape measure of which all in the court room had heard. Gov. Bedle's reference was to a yard tape measure circulated by the company, on the back of which were printed the words, "The International Trust printed the words, "The International Trust Company, corner Washington and Montgomery streets, Jersey City, N. J., is the only savings bank in the State with a paid-up capital of $200,000 for the security of depositors." The indictment, the Governor argued, had followed the words of the statute, but it was bound to go further and specify what written statement it meant, so that the defence might know precisely what charge it had to ropel. Another point made was that the statute had in view the original written statement, but that the indictment charged the circulation of copies of a written statement.

charged the circulation of copies of a written statement.

Public Prosecutor McGill said he was not bound as yet to indicate the specific thing on which he should rest his case. The indictment deciared the nature of the act with sufficient particularity. He had not had time to examine all the possible witnesses in the case personally, and he preferred not to be pushed to his election of a specific act until the case had advanced a little further. As to the point that the indictment referred to the circulating of copies of a statement, and not to the original statement, he said that the wording had not been correctly interpreted by Gov. Bedle, He then rend the disputed passage from a copy of the indictment that lay on the table before him, and afterward handed the paper to Judge Garretson. When Mr. McGill rend the passage had contained a parenthesis, as follows:

—"did then and there circulate and publish; and concern in creatains and publish; got then and there

There were no parenthesis marks in the sentence, but their places were supplied by two commas. The use of these commas, the Public Prosecutor thought, clearly showed that the indictment referred to the circulating of the original written statement.

Judge Garretson refused to quash the indictment, but said that he did so without prejudice to the mover. The law under which it was drawn was new, he explained, and he did not want to take the responsibility of dismissing the case on his interpretation of it.

The Poblic Prosecutor them explained to the struck jury that the company was organized in 1808, under the name of the International Life Insurance and Trust Company, but that about 1873 it ceased to do a life insurance business. Its charter provided for a capital of $100,000, Of this, only $50,000 was actually paid up; the stockholders give their notes for the rest. Afterward $100,000 additional stock was thought desirable, and was actually paid in. Thus the real paid-up capital was only $150,000. Furthermore, Mr. McGill said some real estate in Oswego had largely depreciated in value. The company had acknowledged a loss in its business of $75,000. This loss must be added to the unpaid stock notes, and thus it is demonstrable. Mr. McGill continued, that the paid-up capital stock for the security of depositors was far below $200,000. This President Hayt well knew, and it was on the proof of these allegations that the State relied to sustain the charge in the indictment.

Mr. McGill called ex-Judge Bonnington F. Randolph, director of the Company, and also director of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York city, to the witness stand, Judge Randolph testified that on the 7th of Junuary, 1878, the air was full of runs upon savings banks. He believed the bank was solvent of the second of the second of the second of the second of the School o savings banks. He believed the bank was solvent—that is, it could pay all its liabilities and have some of its capital stock left. Nevertheless, he thought it better not to go on. To avoid the inconveniences of a run, he told the Secretary not to stop taking deposits, but to take them as special deposits. This was done. All of such special deposits had since been paid in full. The other depositors had been paid in full. The other depositors had been paid in full. The other depositors had been paid in the such special deposits had since been paid in the full. The other depositors had been paid in the such special deposits had since been paid in the full. The other depositors had been paid in the full to the same veant during the such that the same van the directors resolved to ask the guidence of the Chancellor of the State, and after an examination of the bank's affairs, the Chancellor allowed the officers to settle up its business. The company did a general savings bank guidance of the Chancellor of the State, and after an examination of the bank's affairs, the Chancellor allowed the officers to settle up its business. The company did a general savings bank business. The company did a general savings bank business. Judge Randolph said that the notes of the stockholders were always viewed as capital, and although he had moved a resolution in the board that they should be paid up, he afterward thought he had made a mistake. He thought so, because these notes were as good an investment as the company had. On the ist of January, 1878, only about $19,000 of these notes were unraid, and after the Chancellor ordered the business to be stopped all were paid but two. These two amounted to about $3,000.

The Public Prosecutor seemed to be content to draw from Judge Randolph a history of the witness was apparently toward the defence. On cross-examination he said that only three other savings banks in the State had any capital stock at all. One of these, in Camden, had $100,000. Another had $20,000, and the third had only $10,000 capital. He, himself, had a deposit of about $6,000 in the bank, and had not sought to get it out. He thought it safe. Hay and Karr also had deposits in it.

As Washington 3, Williams, a special master in chancetry, who had been deputed to examine the condition of the company by the Chancellor, was about to begin his test mony. Gov. Bedle Prowed his pressure upon the Fublic Prosecutor to declare specifically the act upon which the indictment was based in the minds of the Grand Jury.

After argument, Mr. McGill said he would be to try the case on the net of circulating the alloyed laise information printed on the tape

Grand Jury.

After argument, Mr. McGill said he would elect to try the case on the net of circulating the alleged faise information printed on the tape measure. It was expected by many in the court room that Gov. Bedle would immediately move to have the complaint dismissed, on the ground that the words on the tape were printed and not "written," but he said he had no motion to make at that time.

FATHER HAYES ON TRIAL

For Alleged Cruelty in Whipping a Five-Year-Old Boy.

The trial of Father James W. Hayes of Chancellor Preston's household, and Superintendent of the parochial school of St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church, on an indictment Frank Cassacza, 5 years of age, lately a pupil in the school, was begun yesterday in the General Sessions. Father Hayes, who is almost boyish in appearance, sat at the bar, fanning himself steadily with a broad paim-leaf fan.

In his opening for the prosecution, Assistant District Attorney Lyon said that the jury must not permit the sacred office nor the undoubted respectability of the prisoner to warp their judgment. The first witness called for the prosecution was Frank Cassacza, who was led from his parents' side by Office Schoffeld. When he stood upon the witness stand his close-shaved little head did not reach up to the rim of the bench. Judge Gildersleeve began to question him, to ascertain whether he understood the nature of an oath. In the course of his questions the Judge asked: "Do you know what will happen you if you do not tell the truit?" "Ill get the rattan," the boy promptly answered, and the spectators laughed, Judge Gildersleeve said that Frank did not understand the nature of an oath, and that he ought not to be sworn. Lawyer McClure objected to his testifying except under oath, and Judge Gildersleeve sustained the objection.

Lawyer McClure objected to his testifying except under each, and Judge Gildersleeve sustained the objection.

Antonio Cuny, aged 11, of 326 East Eleventh street, testified that he accompanied Frank Cassacza, who lives in the same house, to St. Ann's parochial school in East Eleventh street, on the morning of the 2d ult. They reached the school at a quarter before 9 o'clock. The school was opened at 9 o'clock. He and Frank sat in the same room, though they were not in the same class. Father Hayes entered the room at about half past 2 o'clock in the afternoon. He spoke to Miss Campbell, the teacher, for a few minutes. Then, at her request, ne whipped Peter Cooney, Henry Carbi, Terence Mulgroove, Martin Monaghan, and Mathew Macheri, who had been disobedient in the course of the day, with a cowhide. Frank was kneeling in the middle of the room. Miss Campbell made him kneel there because he talked in his seat to boys about him. As Father Hayes advanced toward him, he sprang up and ran, crying, to his seat. Father Hayes followed him, and told him to take off his nacket. He did not seem to know how to take it off, but he tried. Then Father Hayes struck him upon the head six times, with the cowhide. Frank clung to the back of his seat, but Father Hayes pulled him out into the middle of the room, took off Frank's coat, and whilpped him upon the back, hands, and logs. When Father Hayes pulled him out into the middle of the room, took off Frank upon the hands, he cried, "It hurts me," and Father Hayes said, "I want it to burt." Frank then ran back to his seat, and Father Hayes and said. "I won't do it any more," and Father Hayes and said. "I won't do it any more," and Father Hayes and said. The rest of the parquet and the boxes was a sea of fluttering fans that tossed back ribbons and frizzes from the faces of the graduates' gentle friends. In the doorways leading to the stage lurked boys with floral baskets, ships and bouquets, gifts for the speakers who were to be chosen from the graduating classes.

granders gentle friends. In the doorways leading to the stage lurked boys with floral baskets, ships and bouquets, gifts for the speakers who were to be chosen from the graduating classes.

The exercises were begun by President Barnard, who arose from his great arm-chair, taking off his shovel-board hat and amounced that the Key. Cornelius R. Duffle, Capplain of the college, would offer prayer. Mr. Duffle, in a long black grown, read a prayer, wherein it was asked that the young men might become an honor to the college. Then Edward J. Kunk pronounced the salutatory oration in Greek, and carried off from the stage an armful of flowers, One M.Munroe spoke on the "Advancement of Science," and William Hallock followed with an oration on "The End of this World as an Inhabited Planet." Edwin Lutilow spoke on "The Advantages of a Large City for the Location of a University," and Theodore B. Foster on "The Fature of Arbitration."

President Barnard announced the names of the successful competitors for prizes offered for work done during the year, and of the honor men, or those standing highest in the scale of 100 at the end of the entire course of study. Those obtaining not less than 35 were E. J. Runk, Edwin R. A. Seligman, and William Hallock; not less than 91, T. B. Foster, F. S. Barnum, Abraham Ilich, and John H. Mulcahey; not, less than 87, E. The best talent in the District Attorney's office was engaged in the prosecution, and she was promptly convicted. She was sentenced to the penitentiary for fourteen years. Nearly a month later Frank Cosgrove was allowed to plead guilty as an accessory to the killing of Miss Sammis. Judge Cowing remanded him to the City Prison to await sentence. He is still there, and no day is fixed for grove's counsel.

IN THE COIL OF A BLACK SNAKE, A Child's Adventure with a Reptile Four and a Half Feet in Length. NEWBURGH, June 11 .-- A few days ago, Mr. George Cornell, living on Snake Hill, in the town of New Windsor, adjoining this city, went walking over his farm, accompanied by a five waiking over the larm, accompanied by a live-year-old son. Mr. Cornell had got some dis-tance ahead of the child and suddenly he heard him scream. Mr. Cornell ran back to the boy, and found that a large black snake had coiled himself tightly around the little fellow's leg. It is supposed that the boy unconsclously stepped upon the snake, and that the reptile in-stantly wound himself as Mr. Cornell found him. The father battered the head of the snake with stones until he killed him. It measured four feet six inches in length.
